

Broken Lights

Whats really worth fighting for, when one second is all you have left? Norman Smithson is at the end of the line. His wife left him, women dont look at him, he was made redundant, and at forty, he could be just that little bit slimmer. He would be a has-been if hed ever been a was in the first place. Hes not the Alpha male of the 21st century or of any century. He was the chubby oddball who used to sit silently at the back of the class so he wouldnt get picked on. Rosa is a dreadlocked, tattooed and pierced twenty-something, who uses her image as armour to keep everyone away from every broken thing about her. But her past is about to catch up with her at the exact moment Norman finds himself in completely the wrong place, at the worst possible time. One gunshot, one scramble for life, one unlikely couple, one very long night can one damaged woman and one ordinary man, find the extraordinary in the very last second theyre given? Broken Lights is a standalone story of whats really worth fighting for, when one second is all you have left. *Short novel at just under 40,000 words. Contains strong language and scenes which some readers may find disturbing. Written in British English.
