

Only Pretend

If you wanted to prove that you could change, how would you do it? I had a plan. I also had no family, no friends, and definitely no jerk of an ex-boyfriend who thought I was boring. I was tired of being me. In Vegas, I could be anything. And then I saw him. His hungry smile wanted a taste of the new me. Only a boring person would have said no. It was reckless to follow a stranger to his bed. Dangerous to take the drink he handed me. I thought the worst regret I'd have would be a hangover, a walk of shame through the hotel. Except I didn't wake up in the hotel. Or in Vegas. I doubt my face will end up in the news. Woman missing, the headline would say. A stupid person who thought she could be someone else. I'm not someone else. I was only playing pretend. Too bad he was playing for keeps. --Authors Note-- This is a dark romance novel, it contains themes of violence and mature situations that could make readers uncomfortable.
