

Wives Who Stray: Shared Fantasies

Jane Remington is thirty-two, extremely attractive, and has been happily married to her eccentric, dynamic, big-kid of a husband, Teddy, for eleven years. They have a seven year old daughter and a great life together, except for one small thing. Teddy loves make-believe, fantasy, and dreaming up steamy bedroom scenarios starring his sexy wife and another man. Jane doesn't mind humoring him and playing along, as long as Teddy's daydreams about her remain just that: fantasies. But now she finds herself out of town, on a rare business trip to Boston, staying at a plush hotel just like the one in her husband's very favorite fantasy. That particular flight of fancy features Jane going down to the bar, dressed to kill, and dancing with some very hot guys, one of whom sweeps her off her feet, waltzes her out onto the moonlit terrace, where he makes out with her until she is so turned on she agrees to sleep with him. On her first night in Boston, at Teddy's urging, she decides to go down to the bar and have a drink before she turns in just to see if fantasy can ever become reality. The stranger she meets in the bar, Doug Lassiter, is tall, very handsome, a devil with the ladies, and extremely taken with her. After a number of drinks and some seriously close, wonderfully sensual cheek-to-cheek dancing with Doug, Jane finds herself experiencing exactly the same sort of naughty impulses Teddy keeps going on and on about. Will she give in to them with sexy Doug? Will she stray?
