

Tamed By Him - Book Two: The Billionaires Request (Tamed All Night 3)

Suzy listened to the rhythmic thudding of her feet in the sand below. The beach was still empty despite the time of year and the time of day. It was one reason she loved it so much guaranteed solitude. And today of all days, she needed it. Badly. The tide was out and as she rounded the last bluff, her rented beachfront apartment came into view. The North Oregon coastline had become a place of refuge for her in the years since she had moved there. Redmond, her golden retriever, raced along the shoreline barking at the waves and then snaking over towards her as she headed up the steps to her apartment. She stopped briefly to take a look around. There wasn't a single person on her side of the bluff. Perfect, she murmured and then jumped for cover as Redmond raced up the steps, shaking off sand and salt water in all directions. Redmond! Redmond, no! she screamed and ran into the house. Stay outside, boy, until you dry off a little. She went to the kitchen area and opened the refrigerator door. There wasn't much inside, but there was soy milk and fresh fruit for her protein smoothie. It would have to do for lunch until she could get to the market, but first she needed to catch up on her work. She fixed the smoothie, her specialty of cacao, spinach leaves, banana and avocado, and was heading to the shower when a call came through the computer at her work desk. A picture of her client Katy Maldon came up on the screen and she felt relieved. She always did when Katy or rather Nadia (her friend's former name) called. She was a valuable client but also her oldest friend and in their line of work, friends were a rare commodity. She took the call on her cell phone and flopped into an armchair one of the perks of working from home just as Redmond came bounding into the living room. What's going on? she said, with Redmond's loud barking in the background. Information was the reply. It was enough to let Suzy know that things were serious. One of the first things Nadia did with any new client was a background check. Suzy was a little disappointed but at least it would mean money, and she sure as hell could do with some of that. Who is it? she asked, setting up in front of her massive work station. The four-panel display of 24-inch monitors wouldnt have looked out of place on a financial trading floor. Clayton Hargrave. Of Hargrave Robotics? Youve heard of him? Who hasnt? She turned to her dog who was still barking. Pipe down, Redmond, Im speaking here. Redmond immediately went quiet. He knew not to interfere in his owners business. She turned back to her phone. Not everyone lives like a hermit, you know. Are you going to be working with him? Come on, you know better than that. No details. Just get me whatever you can on him and then send it via the usual channel. Ouch. No problem boss, she said with a twang of playful sarcasm. Did you run out of coffee this morning or something? You could say that. Hmm, mysterious as always. Dont sweat it, boss, Ill have information within the hour. Just hang tight. Im not tight, Nadia said defensively. Uh whatever. Ill be in touch. Look, just remember, stay low, stay clean-- Leave no trace, I know, I know. Dont worry. Call me when you have something. Ruben Mayweather is a man who seeks perfection in all things.
