BOOKS IN THIS SERIES: The Pretend Marriage: A Werewolf Romance The Impending Marriage: A Werewolf Romance (NEW!) Excerpt: So, Terry, Martha says, how did you and Jake meet? Terry says in a well-rehearsed note, We met at the library. Jake clenches his left fist in a gesture of triumph under the table while his right nonchalantly spears a baby potato with his fork. He affects a look of innocence. That's a fine meeting place, Martha exclaims. I met Peter at the library too! No kidding. Terry's smile is plastered. Which library would that be? Uh oh, Jake thinks. Foxhall, he says as Terry simultaneously says, Briggs. They both stop to glare at each other. Briggs, Jake says as Terry says, Foxhall. They glare at each other again. It was either one, Jake says. We can't remember. Your memory is always faulty, darling. Not always, sweetie. Most of the time, darling. Libraries are such wonderful meeting places. Hardly anyone meets in libraries these days with Kindles and iPads and gyms and clubs and websites offering everything from dating services to hookups, Peter declares. Martha says eagerly, I want to hear every single detail of how you both met. Please ... tell us. Yeah, her daughter, Karina, chimes in. As do the rest of the women at the table with the exception of Mika, who looks bored, and Cassie Hirsch, who looks paler by the second. Jake seriously hopes she is not going into premature labor. Ugh. He hasn't rehearsed details with Terry.
