

The Sword of Goliath

David, as a giant-killer and court musician was getting too popular. King Saul put him in charge of a rag-tag company and sent him on what he thought was a suicide mission. The plan backfired, for David was so loved by his poorly equipped soldiers that they fought furiously for him and won a great victory. So impressive was the victory that the court girls sang his praise before the jealous king. This so enraged the neurotic Saul that he ordered his new commander to play the harp for his headache. While strumming his zither for the sick king, the wily Saul hurled his javelin at the youth. The musician was alert, dodged the missile and fled through the night with the mad king following. David fled to Nob Hill, his old family worship center, and beseeched Ahimelech, the priest, for a weapon. The priest took down the sword of Goliath David had given as an act of sacrifice to God. The priest said, David, what you gave to God from your victory, I give back to you in your need. David took it and fled for months with Saul and his army chasing him. Four hundred men followed David. One day they ran out of food, so he sent a squad of men to a nearby farm they had been protecting from Philistine bandits and asked for food. Farmer Nabal refused any help so David became angry and took down the sword! and swore to kill all the Maen farmers, take over the farm and feed his troops. Nabal's young wife, Abigail, learning of the refusal, loaded ten donkeys with fruit, wine and loaves and met David on the road to the farm. He was so impressed, he cancelled the plans for revenge. When Nabal found out he flew into such a rage, he died. David married Abigail and later, she became his queen. David won many more victories with the sword of the Lord and finally became King David, of Israel, history's most illustrious ruler.
