

Sophie in Paris (Sophies Escapes Book 1)

Sophie Michaels has always had a head for business. That's how she obtained such a powerful and important position at Harmon & Klein, and that's why her boss Mark is cutting her vacation short. Things are heating up in Paris, and if Sophie can negotiate the close of a deal with French banking giant Credit Mutuel her firm will net an extra $10 million. But will Sophie's penchant for getting into compromising situations hurt the deal, or propel it forward? EXCERPT You listen to me! Cynthia said, pulling Sophie around the corner and sticking her finger right in her face. Droight & Droight has been planning this deal for months; were not going to let some little Miss Fancy Pants come in here and ruin our deal! Your deal? Sophie said as loudly as she dared, not wanting the others to overhear them. Like Fisher and Dunn were your deal, or Intenia, or Jillup & Jillup, or Those were never your deals, Sophie! Cynthia said, cutting Sophie off. Oh, but Acciona is somehow yours, is that it? Cynthia nodded. Acciona is mine. Sophie shook her head. They were standing off from the main group, who were still listening to Mateo extol the virtues of wind energy, and what this area of Spain could do for Acciona's bottom line. They'd begun walking so Mateo could show them more of the area, and that's when Cynthia had pulled her aside. You're blind if you think Acciona is going to go along with you, Cynthia, not after they hear what Harmon & Klein have to offer them, Sophie said, more exasperated with Cynthia than anything. You're not winning this deal with what's between your legs, Sophie Michaels, not this time! Oh, but you will? Sophie asked, anger edging into her voice. I do whatever it takes to win, Cynthia said coolly. Right, and then you try to put me down for doing the same, Sophie said, shaking her head and putting her hands on her hips. After all, Cynthia, it was you who taught me. A decision I seriously regret, Cynthia said. What made you so jaded, Cynthia? Sophie asked, genuine concern in her voice. Jaded? Cynthia laughed. Sophie, you dont have any idea what jaded feels like, and you wont for some years yet. But believe me, you will.
